God's Promises in Nahum

The book of Nahum primarily focuses on God's judgment against the city of Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire. However, there are also some promises that God makes to his people in the midst of their suffering. Here are a few examples:

1. God promises to restore Judah and Judah's fortunes (Nahum 2:2).
2. God promises to put an end to the Assyrian threat and destroy the city of Nineveh (Nahum 1:9-14).
3. God promises to be a stronghold in times of trouble for those who trust in him (Nahum 1:7).

It's worth noting that while there are promises of restoration and protection for God's people, the book of Nahum also emphasizes the severity of God's judgment against Nineveh and the Assyrians.

4. God promises to bring an end to the oppression of his people by the Assyrians (Nahum 1:12).
5. God promises to bring justice against the Assyrians for their violence and cruelty (Nahum 3:1-4).
6. God promises that he will no longer allow the Assyrians to invade his people's lands (Nahum 1:13).
7. God promises to be a refuge for those who seek him and a stronghold in times of distress (Nahum 1:7).

These promises are given in the context of God's judgment against the Assyrians, who had oppressed and terrorized God's people for many years. The promises remind the people of Judah that God is still with them and will protect them, even in the midst of their enemies' violence and cruelty.

8. God promises to make an end of the Assyrian empire and to scatter its people (Nahum 1:14).
9. God promises to restore the beauty and prosperity of Judah's cities, which had been destroyed by the Assyrians (Nahum 2:2).
10. God promises to bring an end to the Assyrian oppression and to comfort his people (Nahum 1:7).

These promises are given as a source of hope and encouragement to the people of Judah, who had suffered greatly at the hands of the Assyrians. They remind the people that God is in control and that he will ultimately bring justice and restoration to his people.
